

Corporation gives $2,000 to PAGA

Jesse Aguirre, vice president of corporation relations with the Anheuser-Busch Co. in St. Louis, Mo., presented a $2,000 check to the Pan American Golf Association scholarship fund Friday during a reception at the Tropicana Club.

Attending the reception was J.B. Reyes, an executive with the Dallas office of Anheuser-Busch.

Pete Gonzales, spokesman for the Pan American association, said the scholarship program — the Ramon Garza Scholarship Fund — was started in 1983 for graduating high school students.

In 1987, the club awarded two $500 scholarships. Gonzales said increases in the fund will up the awards to $1,000 or more.

The golf association, formed in 1966 and affiliated with the National Pan American Golf Association, has 78 members, all amateur golfers, Gonzales said.

Golf tournaments are scheduled on a regular basis for members and for the general public. Annual events include a partnership tournament, invitational and club championship tournaments.

In addition, the club has raised thousands of dollars sponsoring tournaments to benefit people in the community who have medical or personal catastrophes, Gonzales said.

The club also hosted the national PAGA winter meet in 1984.
